Snappy Dresser

Curtis the crocodile loved clothes. He wore the coolest jeans and the smartest shirts.

Curtis spent hours at the shops, buying new things to wear.

He spent hours in front of the mirror, trying on hats and ties. He was much too busy to play.

“Come on, Curtis,” said his friends. “There’s more to life than clothes. Why don’t you come to the swamp with us?”

But Curtis didn’t want to play in the swamp.

“What about my jeans?” he said. “They’ll get grubby. What about my shoes? I don’t want to scuff them. What about my new hat? It might get wet.”

Getting messy didn’t sound like much fun to Curtis.

“Come on, Curtis,” begged his friends.

“We’re making a new mud slide today. It’s going to be the biggest, fastest slide ever!”

Curtis did like slides. But he didn’t want to spoil his clothes.
