Making a Splash!

We take swimming lessons.

We learn to swim!

This helps us stay safe in the water.

We listen to the
lifeguard, too.

A young boy with dark hair is captured mid-jump, entering a swimming pool. He is wearing a white t-shirt, red swim trunks, and a blue and yellow inflatable life vest. His arms are bent, and his legs are spread wide in mid-air. The pool's blue water is visible at the bottom, with some splashing. A white pool skimmer is visible in the water. A large, diagonal, semi-transparent red watermark reading "For Review Only" is overlaid across the image.

Luke jumps in!

A child is shown underwater, wearing a white long-sleeved shirt, red swim trunks, and blue goggles. They are holding a blue and yellow ring buoy. The child is surrounded by a large amount of white bubbles, suggesting they have just jumped or fallen into the water. The background is a clear blue pool.

Where?

The deep end.

He does not hit
the bottom.
