

The Fox and the Grapes

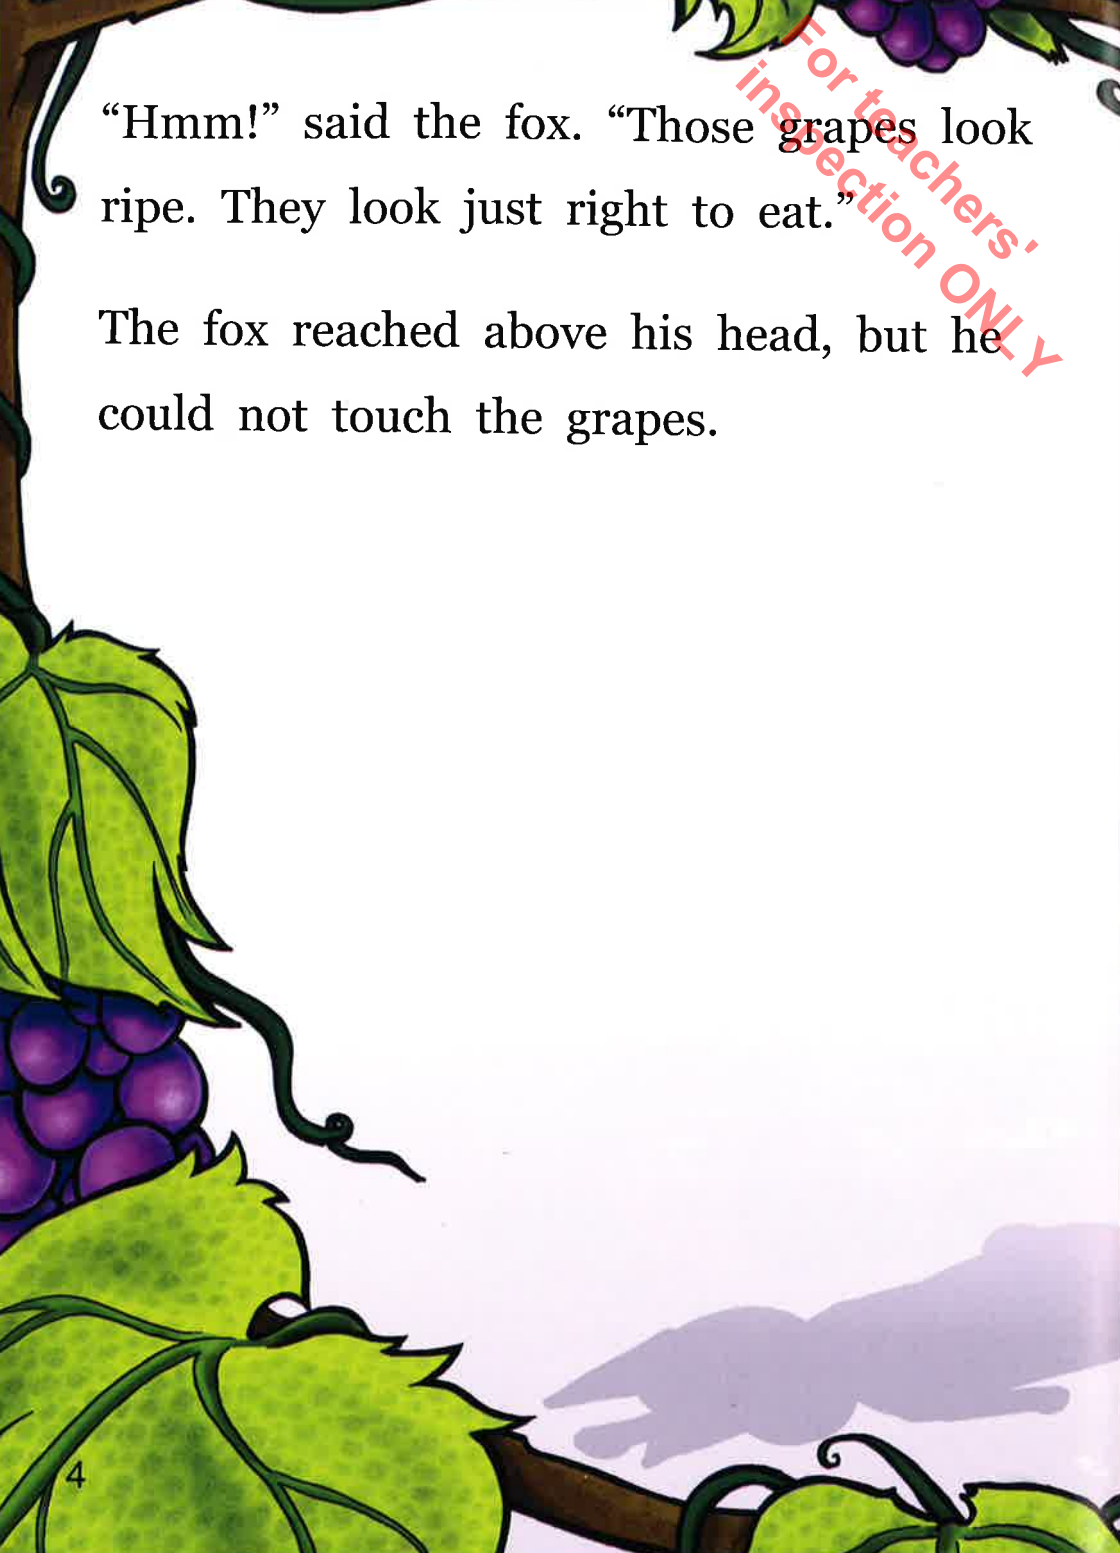

Rodney Martin
Gabriel Cunnett

One day, a fox saw a big bunch of grapes hanging from a vine above him.

The fox looked up and licked his lips.

“Hmm!” said the fox. “Those grapes look ripe. They look just right to eat.”

The fox reached above his head, but he could not touch the grapes.

For teachers' inspection ONLY

“Hmm!” said the fox. “I need to reach higher.”

So the fox jumped, but he still did not reach the grapes.

The Fox and the Grapes

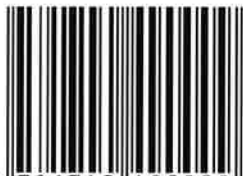

A hungry fox wants some grapes. But they are high above him in the vine.

Can he jump up and reach the grapes?

WINGS Traditional Tales

ISBN 978-174049000-9

9 781740 490009